Cervical Health Matters: Early Screenings Save Lives!

January is Cervical Cancer Awareness Month, a vital time to spotlight the importance of prevention and early detection—especially within African American communities, where disparities in healthcare can increase risks.

Did you know that cervical cancer is highly preventable with regular screenings and the HPV vaccine? Early detection not only saves lives but also opens the door to more effective treatment options.

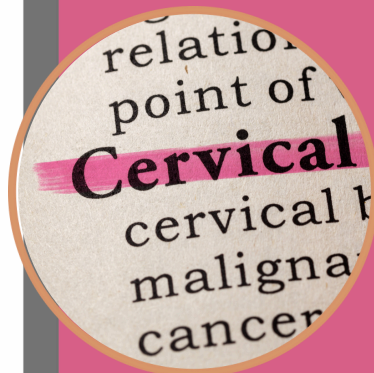

Take control of your health today:

- Schedule a Pap test or HPV screening to detect early changes.
- Learn about HPV vaccines that protect against the most common causes of cervical cancer.
- Find local resources and clinics offering free or low-cost screenings.

You deserve access to quality care and the knowledge to make informed decisions about your health.

Early screenings save lives. Together, we can close the gap in cervical cancer outcomes.
